

50 Hour Sound Healing Therapist Training Course Syllabus

Sound is one of the most profound methods of healing since ancient times. It is a waveform which moves through and penetrates matter therefore it is not just what we can hear. Sound, in fact, causes cells and tissues to vibrate and change their energetic frequency. This is why sound it has the potential to alter every dimension of our being.

Sound Therapy is a healing modality which induces a deep state of relaxation helps reduce levels of stress, anxiety, insomnia, inability to focus, to let go, and many emotional issues. It has also been reported to help reduce mood swings, lowering blood pressure and cholesterol levels, reduce risk of coronary issues as well as help in the process of pain management. Sound therapies can also be used a tool to deepen the quality one's spiritual practices as well as unleashing the ability for self-healing.

Course Objectives

- To give the therapist the tools to be able to conduct individual sound healing sessions.
- To introduce the concepts of sound, frequency, resonance, dissonance, melody and harmony.
- To provide the tools to prepare the therapist, patient and room before and after a session.
- To provide the therapist or a group of therapists the tools to be able to conduct a group sound healing session.

How does a session work?

Prior to a short interview the receiver lies on the back of a soft surface (massage table or on the floor). Instruments are located in specific areas around the body. Instruments are played so that the recipient experiences a richness of sound in its full spectrum resonating and penetrating every cell of the body, the natural vibration of the human being is tapped and a state of intensified awareness brings about a state of emotional-mental-physical well being whilst removing blockages and traumas in the whole system, it leaves the patient with an imprint of harmony and relaxation. The instruments can be played during a 15, 30, 45 or even 60 minute session according to the person's individual needs.
